Valentine's Day:
A day of mandatory expression

STORRS, (AP)—Chocolates or roses, cards or kisses—Valentine's Day gifts are often expressions prodded by commercial interests, not an outpouring of spontaneous love, says a family expert here.

Valentine's Day also can be helpful in gauging the health of a relationship, says Fredrick Humphrey, associate professor of family studies.

"You'd find enormous pressure against you if you failed to come through with a gift," said Humphery, who plans to give his wife of 37 years a card and flowers. "There is an element of pseudo-sentimentality or pseudo-love."

Some of the trouble with the holiday is that it has become a ritual that is trained and not always heartfelt, he said during an interview Tuesday.

"Parents will buy and address cards from small children to adults before the children even know what's going on," he said. "This is how we train kids. And the commercial interests clearly have in interest in this. It's good business. We'd probably drop away (from Valentine's Day) without the advertising and mass media."

According to Humphrey, "Valentine's Day, like a wedding anniversary, is a symbolic day. If you goof up on a symbolic day—like a man getting drunk on his wedding day—it could be representative of what is actually going on in the relationship."

Another UConn professor says it's best to stick to red roses to say, "I love you." But Jay Koths, a professor of floriculture, warned not to send pale colored roses. They convey mere friendship, not a message from the heart, he said.

Koths also says to exercise caution when sending a mixed bouquet—red and white roses together may fall short of the intended aim by sending a message of unity, not love.

Peach or lavender colored roses, said Koths, are appropriate for "a tennis partner" but not a true love. Red and yellow roses together send a message of congratulations, "but you wouldn't give them on Valentine's Day. It would be like saying, 'Oh boy, am I conceited.'"

A bunch of pink and white roses mean, 'I love you

Sexual assault reported in dorm

By Paul Parker
Daily Campus Staff

A woman student was reported being assaulted in her dormitory room on Feb. 2 by a man who allegedly attempted to rape her, in at least the second incident involving alleged rape reported to police since Jan. 31.

Police records show a female reporting she was assaulted near Mirror Lake at about 2:42 a.m. on Jan. 31. A second assault was reported at 4:12 a.m. on Feb. 2. The two incidents are not necessarily related. Thursday night, police would not comment on either incident.

In the first incident, the woman was raped, sources said.

The second incident occurred in a Stowe Hall dormitory room. The victim returned to her room at about 3 a.m. after a snowball fight in South Campus Quad, she said. She went to sleep with the door unlocked because her roommate, who was visiting a friend at another dorm, had lost her key, the victim said.

At about 4 a.m., the victim woke up. She heard a noise that she thought might have been her roommate, she said. She sat up in her bed to check and saw someone lying on the floor next to her bed, she said.

Iacocca shocked at dismissal from post

WASHINGTON (AP)—Lee Iacocca said today he was shocked at his ouster as chairman of a government advisory commission on the Statue of Liberty restoration, saying "In the end, a beautiful project gets hurt; I don't get hurt."

At a news conference in Highland Park, Mich., the Chrysler Corp. chairman first joked at his dismissal, then said the decision by Interior Secretary Donald Hodel to dismiss him without debate "borders on being un-American."

Hodel said Wednesday he fired Iacocca because the chairman would face a conflict of interest if he headed both the volunteer foundation that has raised money and the commission set up to advise the government on how to spend the money.

The firing, Iacocca said, meant that the government would have trouble finding another "idiot patriot" to contribute time and effort toward worthy projects.

More tainted Tylenol found

WHITE PLAINS (AP)—Four states on Thursday banned the sale of Tylenol capsules. Tylenol in other forms was not affected by either the state bans or the warnings from the food and Drug Administration and Johnson & Johnson.

Five capsules in a bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol pulled from a Woolworth's store in Bronxville, a few blocks from the A&P where the first poisoned bottle had been purchased, were found to contain cyanide, said FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young.

George Gerstenberg, the director of the FDA's Brooklyn office, said later that a trace of cyanide had been found in a third bottle, which was taken from an A&P in Shrub Oak, about 27 miles north of Bronxville.

"It was so small an amount that we could barely detect it here, and that's why we had to wait all day until we could confirm it in our Cincinnati plant," Gerstenberg said.

The poisoned capsules showed evidence of tampering—the logo printed on the capsule halves was misaligned, and the bottles had been turned over to the FBI for fingerprint and other analysis, he said.

He said the agency had tested more than 40,000 capsules since Tuesday.

"We're still running samples tonight," he said later Thursday. "We're going to continue sampling and testing until we get to the bottom of this."

By Friday, Young said, investigators should know whether the cyanide was from the same batch as the poison that tainted the capsule that killed Diane Elsroth.

"We've been working around the clock examining thousands and thousands of capsules," Young said in an interview.

Moffett wavers on campaign spending cap

HARTFORD (AP)—Gubernatorial candidate Toby Moffett said Thursday he might prefer to forget about some or all of the money he's already spent when it comes to negotiating a campaign spending limit.

Moffett told a news conference he will argue with his opponents against applying all of the more than $300,000 he's spent in challenging Gov. William O'Neill for the Democratic nomination.

Wednesday, the former Congressman called for a $1.25 million voluntary cap on campaign expenditures prior to the anticipated September primary.

He also suggested a $750,000 spending cap between the primary and general election, and criticized the governor's campaign for at first opposing a voluntary limit and then recently reconsidering that stand.

Moffett said at least some of his spending thus far should not be counted because he claims O'Neill, "despite putting zero on his spending report," has used the governor's office for campaign work.

"We'll negotiate that," Moffett said. "I would argue that not all of it would be counted because the governor has spent tens of thousands of dollars of the taxpayer's money on his own campaign, so we want to get a handle on what that is."

According to Moffett, Democratic State Chairman Timothy Moynihan, an O'Neill ally, has contacted Moffett campaign manager Marc Caplan to discuss voluntary spending limits.

Moffett also said O'Neil is addressing the issues of teen-age pregnancy, water pollution and other problems despite there being "no record in the incumbancy over a 15 or 20-year period of public life having taken one single issue and run with it and organized and built a coalition and done the public education that's necessary."

Unusual smoke seen as possible crash cause

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The presidential commission investigating the Challenger explosion was shown videotape and still pictures Thursday of "a black puff of smoke" betwen the right rocket booster and fuel tank as the space shuttle left the pad, a government official said.

The official, who asked not to be identified, would not go into detail, saying the material would be released later in the day. He sais he did not know the significance of the smoke, but it could indicate Challenger was in trouble from the moment of liftoff.

The panel, which flew to the scene of the shuttle disaster for two days of closed-door sessions, was shown the videotape and photos for the first time Thursday, said NASA spokesman, Hugh Harris. He called the smoke "unusual" but refused to elaborate further.

A space agency official who requested anonymity said the puff of smoke was between the right booster and the external tank when it left the pad. Members of the commission thought it was interesting enough to study further, he said.

Commission testimony so far has centered on possible failure of synthetic rubber seals at a lower segment of the shuttle's right rocket booster.

Previous videotapes and still photographs show a plume of fire and smoke coming out of the bottom section of the right booster 58 seconds after liftoff. The speculation is that this caused the external tank to explode, destroying Challenger and its seven-member crew 73 seconds after launch.

Commission Chairman William P. Rogers said in a statement read to reporters that Thursday's meetings at Kennedy Space Center "were detailed and thorough and a benefit to the commission."

Cuba adopts negative line towards church

HAVANA (AP)—In a fresh signal of Cuba's newly conciliatory attitude toward the Roman Catholic Church, a draft of the Communist Party program for the next five years encourages Cubans to respect the beliefs of churchgoers.

The draft calls on Cubans to honor "the moral integrity of believers" and to avoid any practice that could "wound religious sentiments."

The 187-page document, which has not been made public, will receive final approval at a special party Congress in December after debate at the grassroots level. However, no significant changes are expected from the debate.

The draft was prepared by the party hierarchy for a Communist conclave last week, and copies have been made available to some diplomatic missions here.

"Within the party's policy of encouraging national unity, there is no room for discrimination against believers. Instead, they should be encouraged to participate voluntarily and consciously as citizens and patriots in the construction of socialism," the draft says.

The proposed policy is consistent with what appears to be a studied effort by the government to improve relations with the long-suffering Catholic community, whose members until recently have considered themselves to be outside the Cuban mainstream.

There are now an estimated 210 priests in Cuba compared with a pre-revolutionary total of more than 800. Church activities have been severely limited.

HARTFORD (AP)—Travelers who rely on the Trailways Bus system may find rides harder to come by now that the company has cut its service in New England by 90 percent.

Company officials said Wednesday they might pull out of the region completely.

The service reductions, which went into effect Sunday, are the result of increased competition from other bus companies and commuter airlines, according to Thomas Cheeseman, Connecticut district manager for Trailways.

The library search: violation or not?

By Lori Ann Zajak
Daily Campus Staff

"Please open all bags for inspection. Hand all books to the attendants. Thanks." This is the sign posted at the exit of the Homer Babbidge Library. When leaving the library everyone is required to allow their book bags, knapsacks, briefcases and pocketbooks to be inspected for library materials. Is this a violation of civil liberties?

According to Dennis Thornton, head of Facilities and Collection at the Babbidge Library, it isn't. "By entering the library, you are agreeing to open all bags before exiting," he said and pointed out several signs that state this in the entrance of the library.

The "exit attanders" inspect all bags for books "so that we can make sure they are charged out," Thornton said. All books from the library must be bypassed through the gate by an attender. If a book goes through the gate and set off the alarm before the exit turnstiles, the turnstiles will lock. The attendants just want to make sure no-one will set off the alarm, Thornton said.

But some students are bothered by what the search implies. "The implications are that we're guilty without any reason when they search through our bags. It's as if we're under suspicion for a crime not commited," said Karyn Chamerda, a senior in the school of business. Also an issue with some students, especially females, is the inspection of someone's personal belongings, such as items in a pocketbook.

Thornton stresses that the exit attenders are not looking at any personal items in the inspection, "they don't see anything but library materials. Their attention isn't towards anything but books and magazines," he said.

He explained that because of the number of people going through the library each day (betweeen 5,000-8,000) there really isn't time to look for anything else but books.

One problem for exit attenders is keeping the exit line moving. The lines move "very quickly", Thornton said, because the attenders give quick and thorough inspections. "Although they appear to give a cursory examination, they know what they're looking for," he said.

"If we slowed down and made it look like we were doing a better job, it would slow the line down," Thornton said. Because the line goes so fast, Thornton said, "people assume we don't know what we're doing," and then added, "We're a little more sophisticated than the kids think."

Basically, the students do not give the exit attenders a hassle, Thornton said. One attendant, Rachel McManus, who has been working the exit turnstiles for over seven years, agrees. "99.9 percent of the students are great," she said and described her job as "a lot like babysitting, you have to be firm with them. If you treat the students the way they're supposed to be treated, there is no problem."

Computer donation benefits students

Computer hardware and software, donated to the University of Connecticut by Hewlett Packard and valued at $7,800, will enable students of computer science and engineering to learn more about how computers can help them monitor scientific experiments.

Dr. Keith Barker, associate professor in the School of Engineering and John Pierson, a field marketing representative from Hewlett Packard in Wallingford, worked to get the equipment for UConn.

"This will provide motivation for the students as they're using the latest equipment," says Barker.

Barker, a former professor at the University of Sheffield, had worked with Hewlett Packard in his native England.

The equipment includes a workbench with various instruments plugged into monitoring devices. Once the system is hooked up, each instrument is monitored by the computer and the output is displayed on the personal computer screen. The system can support up to eight instruments.

"The student can set the thing up, let it go automatically, and come back and see a global picture. The data will be stored so if the student wants to go back and look at individual data, it can be done," says Barker.

The screen will show the input controls and the measured values of the instrument being represented, according to Barker. It also is capable of multi-windowing or showing more than one instrument at a time, he says.

Students will get an opportunity to learn the process of digitization, for example, how a computer translates wave forms generated by a bolt meter into components that are convertible into the binary system and represented as such by the computer.

"We cycle students around the hardware and equipment. They can't all use this all the time, so some say write software and then test it while others are writing theirs," says Barker.

In the future, Barker sees the programming capabilities of this equipment providing self testing for student-generated circuits.

Jilted lover sends bomb

STAMFORD (AP)—A bomb found at a construction site may have been an early Valentine's Day present to a worker from a jilted lover, police said.

A quart-sized can filled with gunpowder was found next to a trailer at a construction site on Wednesday. Police said the bomb had not been set, but could have ignited with a spark.

The device, which authorities said was strong enough to have shattered windows, was taken away and detonated by members of Stamford's bomb squad, authorities said.

Deputy Police Chief George Mayer said the scare apparently stemmed from a dispute between lovers, one of whom works at the construction site. He would not reveal the couple's identities or the nature of their animosity.

"It was directed at an individual possibly to scare them," Mayer said, describing the incident as "vengeful...not to win someone's heart."

... assault reported

She leaned over and touched him on the shoulder and was attacked, she said.

"I thought he was going to kill me," she said, "because he was practically strangling me."

The attacker held his hand over her mouth so she couldn't scream, she said. She bit his palm, which caused him to let go, and then she screamed, she said.

The attacker fled.

The woman called police and then was treated at the UConn infirmary. She was released at about 8:30 a.m., she said.

The woman, who wishes to remain anonymous, said she never saw the man's face and there was nothing familiar about him.

She described him as being about 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall and average build. He had light brown hair and, judging from the side of his face, no beard. He wore jeans and a blue ski jacket, she said.

History dinner slated

On March 20, you can have the history of Connecticut -- and eat it too.

A convocation dinner to celebrate Connecticut's 350th anniversary, sponsored by the UConn Department of History, will be held that evening at the Faculty Alumni Center.

The convocation will feature a talk by Christopher Collier, UConn professor of history and State Historian, on "Connecticut: American Microcosm." The dinner, based on recipes from the first cookbook published in America, will feature "chouder", roast breast of capon and a buffet table of cakes and other desserts.

The cookbook, titled "American Cookery," was written by Amelia Simmons and published in Hartford in 1796. It promised to teach "the art of dressing Viands, Fish, Poultry and Vegetables and the best modes of making Pastes, Puffs, Pies, Tarts, Puddings, Custards and Preserves, and all kinds of CAKES from the Imperial Plumb to Plain Cake adapted to this country, and all grades of life."

The menu for the convocation dinner was adapted from the Simmons book in consultation with Caroline Sloat, a 1967 graduate who works at Old Sturbridge Village.

A facsimile edition of the cookbook has been published by Dover, and the UConn Co-op will have copies for sale at the Faculty Alumni Center prior to the dinner.

Following the dinner, Christopher Collier will deliver his talk, with replies presented by Dr. Bruce Faser of the Connecticut Humanities Council, Dr. Christopher Bickford of the Connecticut Historial Society, and Professors Glenn Weaver of Trinity College and Karen Kupperman of UConn.

The event will begin with a cash bar at 5:30 p.m. with dinner at 6:30. The dinner is at $12.50 per person, and reservations, accompanied by a check should be sent to: Kupperman, Department of History, U-103, 241 Glennbrook Rd., Storrs, CT 06268 before March 20.

Hillel to celebrate Shcharansky

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at the University of Connecticut announced today that it will hold a commemorative Shabbat service this evening in honor of the freeing of Anatoly Shcharansky, earlier this week, from nearly nine years of imprisonment in the Soviet Union.

Shcharansky, a prominent Soviet mathematician, computer specialist, and human rights activist, was a leading dissident prior to and during his imprisonment, campaigning actively for the rights of Jews to emigrate from the Soviet Union.

Shcharansky has pledged that he will campaign actively for the freedom of the nearly 400,000 Soviet Jewish dissidents and refuseniks who are seeking exit visas from the Soviet Union so that they may live free lives in the West. Exit visas have been denied this group of 400,000 dissidents, in some cases for one or two years, in some cases, like the Shcharansky case, for longer than a decade.

The commemorative service will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Hillel Houe sanctuary, and all members of the university community are welcome to attend.

Hillel also announced today that it will participate in a Hillel intercollegiate program this Sunday, February 16, beginning at 10:00 a.m. This program, which will be held in West Hartford, will begin with a brunch, and will be followed by a discussion program on the topic of "Terrorism in the Middle East: What Is To Be Done?" Admission to this program is free, and all members of the univerity community are welcome to attend. Rides will depart Hillel at 9:00 a.m. Sunday morning, and will return in the early afternoon.

Want to move up quickly?

Then get in on the ground floor in our undergraduate officer commissioning program. You could start planning on a career like the men in this ad have. And also have some great advantages like:

- Earning $100 a month during the school year
- As a freshman or sophomore, you could complete your basic training during two six-week summer sessions and earn more than $1100 during each session
- Juniors earn more than $1900 during one ten-week summer session
- You can take free civilian flying lessons
- You're commissioned upon graduation

If you're looking to move up quickly, look into the Marine Corps undergraduate officer commissioning program. You could start off making more than $17,000 a year.

We're looking for a few good men.

Don't ignore racism

Racism and fascism are thing we cannot ignore any longer. We must not be blind to political events which seem to have little effect on our own country.

During World War II many people ignored their knowledge of Nazi concentration camps. Eventually, however, we realized that once the Nazis destroyed the "undesirable" elements in Germany, they would forge out and try to destroy any semblance of free will in the rest of the world. For better or for worse, America then stormed Berlin and ended the nightmares. Or did we?

Today the fascist nightmare rages in South Africa. Few people are unaware of the tragedies faced daily by the black majority in that not-too-distant country. Oppressed, repressed, beaten, abused, and demoralized, the uneducated and underfed black majority has no vote in what their political leaders do.

We have learned that racism and prejudice are not good things. We have also learned that if we allow someone else to be treated unfairly, we have no ground by which to protect ourselves from being treated the same way.

We cannot tell Mr. Botha how to run his government. We can, however, make a few suggestions for our own. It is our duty as citizens of this country and this planet to make it absolutely clear that we do not advocate, or even tolerate, the oppression of a race of people within their own homeland.

We as Americans cannot support the South African government as it now stands. On December 1, 1985, the largest and most influential American companies operating in South Africa called on the South African government to abolish its racially segregated education system (N.Y. Times, 12/2/85). In August, 1985, United States banks decided to sever lines of credit to the oppressive government.

Unfortunately, these advances are not enough. Many American corporations, our government, and even the University of Connecticut continue to support the same people who so blatantly violate human rights with political and social apartheid in South Africa.

As educated, housed, and clothed college students, our responsibilities in this world are few and our advantages many. Let's be worthy of our advantages.

National Apartheid Week is from March 21 until April 6.

Educate yourself on the issues, make a decision, then act upon it.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

Nearly $10,000 was unaccounted for in the latest Board of Governor's (BOG) budget and the discrepancy could bankrupt the activity planning group before the end of the semester.

The apparent discrepancy was discovered Thursday during a BOG meeting by one of the board's committee chairmen.

BOG Treasurer Nancy Patterson was not present at the meeting.

Calling the missing $9,500 a "budget foul-up," Student Union Director Thomas Ahern said that unless the money is located, the BOG could run short of funds before the end of the semester.

5 YEARS AGO TODAY

Professional wrestling—a sport of subtle beauty, precisely synchronized manuevers, death-inducing holds. And for more than 2500 screaming fans who viewed a World Wrestling Federation card at the Field House, it was a thrill of a lifetime.

Brazen and confident, Sgt. Slaughter of Paris Island, S.C. struts to the squared circle, blowing his drill whistle and waving his swagger stick at the crowd. Slaughter grabs the microphone from the announcer and bellows, "From the Halls of Montezuma." He winces as the crowd chants "Gomer! Gomer!"

Letters to the Editor

Keep the focus on the problem

Mr. Higgins, you have succeeded in clouding the issues surrounding Shreds by introducing personal attacks, threats, and sarcasm. Stop. Let's try to keep the focus on the problem, not on the people.

Yesterday you introduced a few interesting points, as well as a few fallacies. In sum, you seem to perceive your publication to be fully immune to criticism because you call it art. You also brought obscenity into the discussion, although I have not called Shreds obscene. You cited many examples to support your correlation betweeen brilliant art and obscene violence (your concepts), and to highlight the controversy of art vs. obscenity.

I propose that the question of "art" vs. "obscenity" is moot, and that we pursue it no further. I also propose a shift in focus from defending a publication (small, local issue) to speaking out against violence against women (broad issue), where this discussion began.

Apparently you feel yourself sufficiently learned in women's issues. You proudly point to past statements, as if to draw attention away from present ones. If I am wrong, please correct me, but it appears that you find not only nothing wrong with literary and photographic violence against women, but actually promote it as an artistic right. I disagree with you on this point. Violence is violence.

Your letter tried to make it seem as if Ms. Young and I had issued contradictory statements, and your letter fails under scrutiny. You only presented parts of the statements we issued--a sorry tactic at best. If you read the Febrary 6 article, you will note Ms. Young to actually have stated "There were quite a few people opposed to this magazine, and I don't think it's fair to make people's money go to something they don't want or approve of". She was responding to the question of USG funding for Shreds. You also distorted my statement by shortening it. I actually said, "Having overheard quite a number of students discussing how 'unfair' it was for USG to withhold funding for a 'literary magazine,' I believe there is a consensus of support for Shreds, and that it is totally unjustifiable." Your misquotation erased the fact that many of those who had actually seen a copy of Shreds were offended by it. At the USG meeting last semester, where you sought and were denied funding, and in press releases this semester, you have called Shreds a "literary magazine." I propose that "literary magazine" calls to mind a certain image of art and literature in creative expression. The campus looked forward to a literary magazine, and so did the owners of Dairy Mart and Donny Mart, two of your patrons. I spoke with the owners of both stores, and their reaction to Shreds is that the magazine is not at all what they were led to expect. Bud Rawls of Dairy Mart said, "When Shreds asked for money for a literary magazine, I said sure. They said it would be poems and short stories from students on campus who wouldn't get published otherwise. I didn't get a copy until it came out. I wasn't expecting a publication like this, with the way they treat women. I don't want Dairy Mart associated with this." Don Chatterton, owner of Donny Mart, concurred wholeheartedly. "The focus of the magazine was misrepresented when they asked for support. I don't want any association with this magazine." Students also spoke up. "I was expecting something much more tasteful. This is disgusting," said Jane Klatt, and her sentiments were echoed by many, many others.

Do I tell women and men they are incapable of making their own decisions. No. Do I advocate censorship? No. Do I think every single item in Shreds is fraught with violence? No. There are actually a very few which struck me positively. On the other hand, do I think that Shreds as a whole, contains pervasive visual and textual images of violence against women? Yes. Am I offended by such images, as representative of an attitude of domination and control which does exist in reality and does cause untold real pain? Yes. Do I feel that because there are real-life counterparts to the images in Shreds, and because Shreds seems to trivialize the actual consequences of such violence, that treating the subject in such a manner is inappropriate? Yes? Do I feel it to be the authors' clear responsibility, if they are indeed sensitive to the issue of violence against women, to state clearly and emphatically their opposition to said violence? Yes, I do.

And that Mr. Higgins, is where we differ. I propose that as more people become aware of the scope of the problem of violence against women, the more people will be willing and able to stand up when such images are promoted and say "I find that offensive" -- artistic license not withstanding. Whether Shreds is published or not -- or is art or is not -- is inconsequential, because Shreds is not the problem. The problem is that our society has condoned and promoted exploitation of and violence against women for far too long, and too many people live by the "Ostrich law" -- if you don't like something, don't look, or don't read, or don't participate.

Yes, I am seeking social change, but I am not alone. And it seems that those who advocate violence as a means of social change see their choices as either win or lose for their future. I advocate change through education, and a win-win solution for all concerned.

Mr. Higgins, complex issues are difficult to debate by letter. On bahalf of the Rape Education and Awareness Program, I invite the Shreds staff and any interested students to come, meet with us, and discuss our respective viewpoints. Please call 486-4738 to arrange a convenient time to meet.

...on the *Shred*itors

● Mike Lumish's letter to the Daily Campus, in response to Chip Darius' objections to material in Shreds, neatly points up some of my issues with the magazine. The problem, as I see it, is that although the Shreditors sincerely believe that none of the works in the magazine promotes violence against women, they are...well...to be brief, they're wrong.

Both Gary Higgins and Mike Lumish have defended with irrelevant arguments the accusations that Shreds contains dangerous material. Lumish points out that the Shreditors are very concerned about women's issues; Higgins says that his work intends to be ironic. Well and good—but who cares? The intention of the artists and Shreditors is largely irrelevant when the actual work does something else. I have met both Gary and Mike; I know that they are not engaged in any conscious conspiracy to degrade women or to harm women's interests, in specific or in general. But, regardless of intent, Higgins' cover montage for Shreds and his piece "Blood-Covered Lipstick" fail to work ironically. It's a subjective call on my part; but, frankly, it's also a thoughtful and well-studied one. The problem is that he is using language and visual image in a way that is not 'outrageous" or thought-provoking or even unusual; it's part of a quite well-established convention in male-dominated culture to depict brutality toward a woman—and yes, the woman is in some sense representative of women in general. Surely the Shreditors must see that it is significant that this montage appear on the cover of the magazine, which must by its very nature characterize or encapsulate its content. The magazine's chosen focus on violence toward women, in conjunction with an admitted fondness for the artist's expression in the form of rage, suggests not only that rage is appropriately expressed by violence toward a woman, but also that such expression characterizes vitality, imagination, "the magical vision of the epic artist." The manifesto on the cover says that they want to see imagination "in all its forms: the perverse, the ugly, the sordid, the absurd, and the crazed along with the beautiful, the sensitive, the illuminative and the clear." This string of adjectives does not explicitly include "the violent." Yet here is a catalogue of the actual violent words in the manifesto: cutting, tearing, slashing, dismembering. An interesting coincidence: these words appear beside a montage of a cut, torn, slashed woman's face. Now, if the particular arrangement of the magazine does actually have the effect of encouraging people to express their visionary rage through violence toward women—will the Shreditors console themselves by insisting that they didn't intend it?

Stolfi doesn't have the facts

● If the American public is misled, it is often by people who do not have all the facts and we wish that Mr. Stolfi had checked with us before writing his editorial "Feed the Poor Here". The hunger problem is not a recent phenomena, as Stolfi suggests, and neither is ConnPIRG's committment to helping solve the problem of hunger and food.

ConnPIRG VISTA volunteers organized Connecticut Co-ops and also provided help to the Willimantic Food Co-op, as well as others in Connecticut. Connecticut Co-ops has since merged with others to form Northeast Co-ops, a 15,000 member, $9 million per year business that serves New England by providing their members with quality low-cost food.

In addition to this, ConnPIRG organized the Hartford Farm markets which achieved two goals. One was to provide low-cost, high quality food from farmers to inner-city residents. There are currently four farmers markets opertaing in the state. Secondly, we taught the farmers how to run their own business. ConnPIRG helped the farmers form the Connecticut Association of Farmers for Retail Marketing (ConnFARM). This provides a direct market in the city for farmers who previously had nowhere to sell and at the same time has preserved Connecticut's agriculture by keeping small farmers in business.

Along with these, seven "Feeding the Future" reports have been published by ConnPIRG researchers to support these projects and also support our long term goal of agricultural land preservation which ConnPIRG has lobbied for in the past. We are not a social service agency and we are into more than just simple handouts.

More recently, UConn for Africa has become a part of the National Student Campaign Against Hunger (NSCAH) that is a project of the PIRG's in conjunction with USA for Africa. Ten percent of all the money raised goes to fighting hunger in the U.S. NSCAH is a way to get more people involved on a large scale and gives them the chance to "do more than buy the record."

The students involved have volunteered their time to raise money and educate the public about hunger. UConn for Africa hosted a forum comprised of local experts to discuss, answer questions and offer solutions to the hunger problem in Connecticut. Students also spent weekends collecting well over $500 in food and then prepared it to feed those at St. Paul's Soup Kitchen in Willimantic.

This semester UConn for Africa is planning a local live-aid concert on campus to benefit hunger and this is only a start. The group plans to focus its efforts on hunger in Connecticut. If UConn for Africa and NSCAH were a bandwagon group, would USA for Africa make a grant of $100,000 to us to expand the hunger project and help solve the local hunger problems?

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all of those who have supported UConn for Africa and encourage others to jump on the bandwagon to help make things like Live-Aid a success. Mr. Stolfi, while you are questioning the motives of those that reach into their pockets to buy that record, we suggest that you question the motives of your elected officials who continue to cut social welfare programs like WIC and foodstamps. Your letters might serve more purpose directed to your local Senator & Representative. Maybe if there were more groups on the bandwagon there wouldn't be a hunger problem to argue about.

People must decide fate

● In response to Matt Cookson's article on Feb. 12:

Although I agree with the gist of the commentary, I believe you're making the same error that some of our more infamous military politicians of the past have.

War, if fought today—and as it currently is, will not be fought with technology alone. Technology has added much to the impersonal nature of conflict, but the underpinnings of recent wars have been that of soldier against soldier. I say again that technology has provided mankind with fearsome destructive powers, but these weapon systems are only as good as the men and women who operate them.

In all warfare, since and before the beginning of the nuclear age (1945 to present), tactics, strategy, and the tenacity and fighting skills of the common soldier have played the decisivie role in the outcome of these conflicts. As seen in Korea, the Middle East, Vietnam, and most recently, the Falklands War, a relatively small but intensely trained military unit can frequently overcome an opponent possessing overwhelming technology and firepower.

It is in my opinion that the government should seriously curb expenditures on "political bargaining chip" weapons. Rather, the conventional military machine should be strengthened and trained more intensely. This will not only result in less tax dollars being spent on systems that (in all reality) will never be used, but also on in the capability of the United States to react to conventional crisis situations more adeptly. This will pose a more credible threat than all of our technologically advanced nuclear weapons combined.

The military budget could be lessened considerably, while our credible and realistic sense of "defense safety" could be enhanced.

No, technology does not fight wars...people fight wars! And it is up to people, not technology to decide our fate in such a situation.

Shreds content battle continues

● Mr. Lumish and fellow Shreds editors, we have parlayed letters back and forth here in the editorial page, and I feel we must be frank. You, as editors, perceive the material you have published to be art. I, a reader, perceive the same material to contain a pervasive theme of male dominance of and violence toward women. If we each become defensive in our views, neither of us will ever attempt to accommodate the views of the other. To avoid this, let us turn from opinions and focus on objective standards.

You claim that the Shreds manifesto explains why there are themes of sexual violence in the magazine, both in text and photos. Among other things, the manifesto calls for forms of imagination such as perverse, ugly, beautiful, and clear, attempting to "tear, slash, and totally dismember" bland thinking. Regarding attitudes toward women, I perceive the ugly and perverse parts in Shreds, but where is the beautiful part? Where is the sensitive? Where is the counterbalance to photographs, stories, and poems which illustrate mutilation and murder, rape and callousness, and depict women as mere objects for men's use, abuse and domination? You claim your staff is sensitive to violence against women, and is saddened by it, but I find no support for such statements in the magazine.

At the USG meeting last semester, where you sought and were denied funding, and in press releases this semester, you have called Shreds a "literary magazine." I propose that "literary magazine" calls to mind a certain image of art and literature in creative expression. The campus looks forward to a "literary magazine," and so did the owners of Dairy Mart and Donny Mart, two of your patrons. I spoke with the owners of both stores, and their reaction to Shreds is that the magazine is not at all what they were led to expect. Bud Rawls of Dairy Mart said, "When Shreds asked for money for a literary magazine, I said sure. They said it would be poems and short stories from students on campus. I did not see a copy before it went to print. I wasn't expecting a publication like this, with the way they treat women. I don't want Dairy Mart to be associated with these types of violent attitudes toward women." Don Chatterton, owner of Donny Mart, concurred wholeheartedly. "The focus of the magazine was misrepresented when they asked for support. I don't want any association with this magazine." Even students who had expected a collection of poetry and stories from a literary magazine were repulsed. "I was expecting something much more tasteful. This is disgusting," said Jane Klatt, and her sentiments were echoed by many, many others I spoke with. I still maintain that the air of support that used to exist was one which supported a different concept. Shreds in its final form is, by and large, not supported on campus.

As an avant-garde publication, one would expect equal time for various targets of violence: men, women, children, society, bureaucracy, etc. But women are the targets, in words and photos. Why? Apparently avant-garde is a label which does not apply.

Yes, Mike, there is a reality which cannot be denied. I also feel that we both are dissatisfied with its current state. But to expose such complex issues as socially sanctioned violence against women, and only present material which depicts and suports current problems, does nothing to change attitudes. Irony is a subtle thing, misunderstood irony is silence, and silence signals support. The argument that the violence in Shreds is "irony" and actually pro-feminist simply does not stand.

I really believe that Shreds could become an incisive, interesting creative expression. However, the first issue seems to be far too focused to merit such accolades.

Mr. Lumish, it is very hard to discuss complex issues via letters. On behalf of the Rape Education and Awareness Program, I would like to invite the staff of Shreds and any interested students to meet with us to discuss our respective viewpoints. Please call 486-4738 to schedule a meeting.

Weight: lose in love, gain in marriage

We've all heard about the delicate wisp of a lass who marries and gains 30 pounds during the first year. People gossip about how she has "let herself go now that she has caught a man." And often this initial weight gain is matched, pound for pound with additional weight gains following each pregnancy.

Many theories have been put forth to explain this weight increase. Some experts would say the woman was genetically programmed to reach a higher weight. Their data demonstrates that aging and pregnancies do trigger some response in women's bodies that probably also occurred in their mothers' and grandmothers', making them heavier during similar times of life.

Other researchers suggest that the boredom and stress of marriage and motherhood drive many a good woman to food abuse. Still others say that the expanded figure is a way for this woman to hide her femininity and that the fat protects her from social demands she could not otherwise deal with.

Finally, some explain the change in shape as the inevitable result of long term premarital dieting. Food restraint lasted unitl the wedding gown was worn but then the years of deprivation gave way to the job of cooking for, and eating with, the husband.

There is undoubtedly some truth in all of these theories. Different women have gained weight for different reasons. But there appears to be a nearly universal thinning in divorcing women and in older women (and men for that matter) who are newly in love. While in many instances this weight loss is just 5 or so pounds, in some ladies it is pronounced enough so that they appear to be "the incredible shrinking woman."

Let's take a look at a woman's life as she faces divorce. Certainly this is a stress-filled time with legal problems, financial changes, separation of goods, dividing of friends, suffering of children and loss of spouse. This time, at best, may be described as a hassle and at worst as devastating.

Women undergoing such trauma often lose their appetites. Food is no longer associated with anything pleasant. Family life and mealtimes have lost their cozy glow. Perhaps her role as a procuror and preparer of food has been rejected. Certainly dinner party invitations are on the decline. But is this enough to account for major weight loss? Perhaps not.

As a divorcing women begins to rebound from the shock of change, she begins to search for resources within herself. Losing weight may be a survival response. When she was thin people found her interesting. Being thin is equated with being alive, with being marketable.

"I knew that if I wanted to date again I would have to look good...so I used my general lack of interest in food to get me started on a diet," reports one divorcee.

She had just lost 47 pounds and a 210 pound husband. The will to survive and to start over again was the major motivation behind her dieting behavior. A bit of anger in the "I'll show him" sense (directed at the ex) is also a healthy part of this mind set.

The "older" person who is newly in love also tends to drop weight. Here are people between the ages of 30-63 whose lives have been going along in a relatively stable flow when one day—smack—they bump right into a love object. One of the first real changes to be reported is weight loss.

Miraculous weight loss due to pining over the beloved or feeling so happy that extra food is not needed are common occurrences. This happens often enough that you can almost bet a friend with a reduced shape is in love. Of course, should love lead to marriage there may be a tendency to gain weight during the first year...

and always will,' said Koths. "You can send them when you run out of red roses."

Meanwhile, Alex Cardoni, UConn associate professor of clinical pharmacy, jokingly urges restraint when giving chocolate to a loved one, unless you're prepared for the response.

"There are at least trace amounts of phenethylamine in chocolate," said Cardoni, adding that the ingredient is part of the amphetamine family.

"In high, experimental doses, phenethylamine can cause psychosis. Maybe eating a lot of chocolate can do strange things bordering on craziness, like buying a dozen roses for $60. There might be some biochemical basis for why people buy chocolate for Valentine's Day."

Despite its shortcomings, Humphrey believes Valentine's Day promotes more positive than negative emotions.

"If more people acted like every week was Valentine's week, (family therapists) would have a lot fewer clients. One of the most common complaints for many couples is 'you don't understand me, you don't care about my feelings.' Everybody likes to be told they're loved," Humphrey said.

From Beethoven to Bolling and Back to "Baroque"

By Susan Donoghue
Daily Campus Staff

Beethoven, Barber, Bartok, and Bolling...Baffled by this barrage of beguiling boys? No need to worry--they are only composers of the works Mary Lou Rylands chose to do for her Faculty and Friends Recital Wednesdav night. February 11 at 8:15. Ms. Rylands got her performance degrees at Oberlin Conservatory and Yale, and is now Associate Professor of cello at the University of Connecticut. Ryland's accompanist was Leonard Seeber, piano professor here also at UConn.

Rylands began with the Beethoven Sonata Op. 102, no. 2. In the first movement, piano and cello merrily tossed playful themes back and forth. The second movement was slow and sad, its melody a soft, trodding, mournful voice.

Sonata Op. 6 for Violincello and Piano by Barber was a domineering, fiery piece. The piano sounded like crackling thunder as Seeber cleanly executed some virtuostic licks in the first and third movements. Ryland's second movement was very lyrical. The last, parting phrases seemed especially heart-felt.

After intermission Rylands returned with Ellen Rowe, Assistant professor of Music at UConn, to perform Bartok's Rhapsody No. 1 for Violin and Piano. The cello transcription was arranged by Bela himself, and he didn't disappoint us. His free, schmaltzy style is the kind musicians can truly wail on, and these two certainly did! Rylands brought out the best of both the extreme dark and light registers of the cello that this piece exploits, and Rowe put some great edges on those accents.

The last "B" on the program was a movement from Claude Bolling's Suite for Cello and Jazz Piano Trio called "Baroque in Rhythm". The piece began with a perky statement by the cello which as picked by the piano in a fugue-like manner, and these two lines weaved in and out for a while. Then the double bass, played by Sam Sherry, and the drums, played by Tim Keane, joined in. This unusual combination of instruments was surprisingly compatible, producing a good-natured, smiling feeling. Some of the chord progressions reminded me of Charlie Brown music.

Unfortunately, the belittled Brown doesn't fit in too well with the evening's composers. Better to leave the ballads and binaries to Bach, Brahms, or Buxtehude!

"T.N.T." to explode in New Haven

NEW HAVEN—Brian Alden and Michelob are pleased to present the Temptations and the Four Tops on Friday, April 4th at 7:30 and 10:30 p.m. These two concerts will be performed at the Palace in New Haven. They are sponsored by Brian Alden and Michelob.

After years of non-stop hit-making the Temptations are hard to top. The mighty Tempts have weathered the motor city music craze of the '60s, the psychedelic '70s, disco madness and the new music of the '80s. They're one of the precious few units who rode the crest of music's new wave right into 1983. Their love songs, party songs, songs of social injustice, have given the Temptations a stronghold that keeps them on top.

So where does a group go after it's been to the top? There's only one alternative - back to the basics. That's just what they've done with their album, Back to the Basics. The Temptations reach for early youthful melodies and chords; the ones that flavored earlier hits, but there's a twist, because the end result is a sound so innovative and exciting that only the tempting Temptation could do it.

The Four Tops -- Levi Stubbs, lead vocalist of the Four Tops says about their album Back Where I Belong, "This album offers some of the best songs and performances that we've done For us, coming back to motown is like coming back home. There is still a sense of family unity that you will never find at any other record company. Since the Tops have been like brothers for years, the whole thing just works well."

This episode is just another notch in an illustrious career as international artists that has spanned more than two decades. And even now, the Tops sound as good, if not better, as they have

Jazz and Heritage festival expands

BOSTON—It's a blend of the old and the new. The Boston Globe Jazz and Heritage Festival this year may have a new name and some new events, but in keeping with tradition, it will still have some of the top names in the world of music today.

This year's festival will be held March 13-23 and includes such headliners as jazz pianist Keith Jarrett, trumpet players Miles Davis and Freddie Hubbard, vocalists Nina Simone and Mel Torme, the Count Basie Orchestra, George Shearing, folk singer Joan Baez, blues singer B.B. King and the big band sand of the Glenn Miller Orchestra.

For its 15th presentation this year, the Globe and festival producer George Wein have broadened the concept of the event to include "heritage" in its title and in several of the events.

"Expanding the program with other musical styles," says Richard A. Collins Jr., Globe public affairs director, "allows us to reflect the extraordinary cultural heritage of New England and provide good entertainment for people with varied musical tastes at prices they can afford."

Besides 14 performances by top stars, the festival will have three new events: a Jazz Symposium at the Boston Public Library Saturday, March 15, entitled "The Basie Legacy: Past, Present, and Future," moderated by Dan Morgenstern, director of the Rutgers Institute of Jazz Studies; "A Feast of Irish Song, Music, and Laughter," on St. Patrick's Day, Monday, March 17, at the Berklee Performance Center; and a "New Orleans Cabaret Night," at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel, Wednesday, March 19, featuring the Olympia Brass Band from New Orleans.

Most performances will occur at Boston's Symphony Hall, the Berklee Performance Center, or Boston's Opera House. Patrons are urged to check the Globe newspaper for details on performers, dates, times, locations, and various ticket prices.

Tickets are available at all Ticketrons, Concertcharge (497-1118), Teletron (720-3434), and performance hall box offices. Cabaret Night tickets are available through mail order only.

The Emmy Award winning Motown 25th Anniversary Special was the arena for the big Temptation/Four Tops challenge of 1983. The two groups together onstage sent sparks and flames out into the audience. In fact the guys caused such a stir that a nationwide "T.N.T." (Tempts 'N Tops) Tour was kicked off shortly thereafter. The tour swept across the country, selling out a majority of dates. Fans hit the box offices anticipating Tempts 'N Tops dynamite. They got what they wanted because the T.N.T. Tour was explosive.

Steve
Having you near and dear to me is one of the few things I treasure most. In your arms I feel warm, safe and loved. You make me laugh and feel happy in ways that no one else ever has. And as every day passes my love for you grows. I never would have imagined that I would still love you after all this time. But, I'm glad that I do.
Steve will you by MY VALENTINE.
Love Always

GENERAL

L.S. My buddy, there is no perfect personal. I would say 'I love you' and that things are going to get better, but you know all of that. Let's take this for all that it's worth by making note of the all important things; through whatever and whoever, whenever an wherever - let us not cross the same bridges twice for that is an indication that we didn't quite do things right the first time. We'll fight and be confused, swear and suffer from severe tension, moan, cry - and apologize. But through all of that, Laura, let's keep the love and the words coming, because in anger it is much too easy to forget. That's all...

Bad J.W.,
Your promised personal has finally arrived. Amen for a little divine intervention on the bridge. Hope you have a super Valentine's Day! Love, Heidi

Women's hoop faces red-hot Providence

From back page

Peggy Walsh led UConn with 24 points and 13 rebounds. Tammi Sweet scored 14 and Jill Brumbaugh and Jennifer Weideman added 11 points each.

The main problems for the Huskies were Providence's domination of offensive rebounding and free throw shooting. UConn outshot Providence from the field, 30 for 54 to 28 for 61, but the Lady Friars were 18 for 24 from the free throw line while the Huskies were just 8 for 11.

Providence got many second chances with their 17 offensive rebounds, compared to UConn's seven.

The Lady Friars have four players averaging in double figures. King is their leading scorer, averaging 18.3 points and 8.8 rebounds per game. Burke averages 16.2 points and 8.2 rebounds. Joanie Powers and Sable each average 12.3 points, and Sable leads the conference with 6.5 assists per game.

"They're the most talented team we've played all year," Auriemma said.

As a result of this, he said that the Huskies must control the tempo.

"I think the key is to slow the game down and not let it get away from us," Auriemma said.

UConn goes into the game at 12-11 overall and 4-9 in the conference. That mark ties them with Pittsburgh for sixth place. Wednesday's loss left them no chance of overtaking Boston College for fifth.

Auriemma said he thinks that the Huskies can put that loss behind them Saturday.

"These kids have bounced back all year," he said. "I know they're going to do that against Providence."

...Swimmers set to meet Eagles

From back page

swim anybody good," Husky head coach Peter McDevitt said. "They don't swim any Big East teams (except Providence, even though they are in the Big East, a practice allowed in conference swimming), and we're probably their toughest meet all year."

Boston College coach Tom Groden agrees with McDevitt.

"UConn is a very good team," Groden said. "They are definitely the best team that we've faced since the UMass meet before Christmas."

A swimming practice that isn't performed before Christmas but that is ritualistically performed every year toward the end of the season is the swimmers' annual "shaving down," a procedure in which the swimmer shaves his entire body to reduce overall times (due to a better feel of the water).

Southern Connecticut shaved down for the meet last Friday, and their reduced times were a major factor in the Huskies' defeat. Boston College shaved down as well before last year's meet with UConn, and although Groden said there was no way he was going to say whether his swimmers were going to shave down or not, McDevitt is planning on it.

"They probably will shave down for us tonight," McDevitt said. "It didn't help them too much last year though, because we beat them by over 100 points at the Big East championship."

Tonight's Big East contest will witness a number of Husky swimmers swimming in events that they don't usually participate in.

According to McDevitt, many of his top-scoring swimmers, including Faunce, co-captain Tom Birmingham, Duncan Sikes, Bob Bowes, Doug Rounds, Jim Lowe and Sam Jalet will all be swimming in different events.

Faunce and Birmingham will probably swim the 200-yard freestyle (farther than either of them usually swim in the free), while Sikes will take a break from his domination of the 200 yard individual medley and the 500-yard freestyle event to swim a leg in the 400-yard medley relay as well as competing in the 1000-yard freestyle. Bowes will probably swim the 200-yard IM as well as the 200-yard butterfly, and Rounds and Jalet will most likely participate in Birmingham's event, the 50-yard freestyle. Jim Lowe will take a break from the 1000-free to swim the 200-yard freestyle event.

"I don't know how we're going to do because we always have the guys wanting to swim these different events," coach McDevitt said. "That's the problem with having a small team."

Small team or not, the Huskies will have to control the scoring of Eagle 100-yard freestylist Kevin Kenny, a junior who is virtually undefeated on the season, and diver Geoff Geiss, a senior who qualified for the NCAA division I nationals for the second year in a row.

"Kevin is swimming very well for us this year," Groden said.

Holy Cross tops Huskies

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)—Senior Jim McCaffrey scored 22 points and Holy Cross held off a late UConn rally for a 73-70 victory Thursday night, the second time this season a Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference basketball team has defeated a Big East school.

McCaffrey, who scored 16 of his points in the first half, halped stake Holy Cross, 9-14, to a 34-27 halftime lead. In the second half, the Crusaders hiked their lead to 58-46 with 8:19 left.

UConn, 12-9, rallied behind the outside shooting of senior guard Earl Kelley, who scored a game-high 28 points, and closed to 69-66 with 42 seconds left on a Kelley jumper. However Paul Durkee hit a pair of free throws with 33 seconds remaining and Glenn Tropf added two more with seven seconds left as the Crusaders held on for the victory, their first over a Big East squad since beating the Huskies 82-73 two years ago.

Brian Reale added 17 points for Holy Cross, and Tropf had 14, all in the second half. Tim Coles had 14 for UConn.

Earlier this season, St. Peter's edged Seton Hall of the Big East 61-60.

Women must bounce back

By Joe Erwin
Daily Campus Staff

Wednesday night the women's basketball game suffered what coach Geno Auriemma called their toughest loss to take all year, a 59-55 loss to Boston College. Now they face the unenviable task of traveling to Providence.

When the Huskies confront the Lady Friars Saturday at 2 p.m., they will be facing the Big East leaders, at 11-2 in the conference and 18-4 overall. Providence is also riding a nine-game winning streak and has not lost a conference game at home all year.

The Lady Friars have been blowing out opponents all year, but UConn played them very tough at the field house, losing 74-68.

"I thought we played them pretty tough here," Auriemma said, "butit will be a lot tougher in their building."

In the game here, Providence jumped out to a 37-27 halftime lead and held off the Huskies in the second half.

Doris Sable led the Lady Friars with 18 points in that game. Mary Burke added 16 and Britt King and Doreen Ferguson each scored 11.

Just two games ago, the men's hockey team had its back to the wall and desperately needed wins over ECAC rivals North Adams and Holy Cross. The team rose to the occasion and posted two hard-fought wins, improving both their conference record (11-9) and their chances for a post-season bid.

And now, with Division III Fairfield University on tap for tonight in a non-league game, you might think the team will get a well-deserved break in a contest that seems to have little importance.

But that's not the case. When the Huskies face off against the Stags tonight at the Ice Rink at 7 p.m., head coach Ben Kirtland will be, once again, in search of a needed win.

"This is a big game for us," the coach said. "It will give us a chance at getting back to the .500 mark (the team currently is 14-15 overall) and also allow us to gain some satisfaction."

"As for the playoff sistuation, a good overall mark can't hurt you, and it will be evaluated (by the playoff selecting committee) but I'm not sure of the weight it will carry."

Kirtland expects the Stags to be competitive, noting that Fairfield has played UConn tough in past years. The Huskies lead the overall series 10-1 in games.

Fairfield promises to be a formidable opponent, and as soon as UConn is done battling the Stage, New England College skates into the arena on Saturday night for a 7 p.m. game. And that game will have ECAC implications.

"The New England game will be very important as well," Kirtland said. "One playoff criteria is how well you do against teams in the conference that are below you. A loss to New England would mark the third loss to a lower ECAC team for us and that could be detrimental in the selection committee's eyes. A win would put us three games over .500 in the conference and in a real solid position for the playoffs."

The team, as it strives for the playoffs, has been playing excellently as of late and is currently riding a three-game winning streak. The defense has been the real key, as Kirtland pointed out that each of his blueliners has contributed a great amount to the Huskies' consistency.

Offensively, Kirtland is pleased with the fact that all three lines are producing, giving UConn a balanced attack.

After this weekend's action, UConn has only more game, against American International College in Springfield. Out of the three games remaining, the Huskies face two ECAC opponents and will need to beat at least one, if not both (New England and A.I.C.).

Basically, the Huskies have to keep up the pace to finish with a playoff chance.

"Our biggest area of concern is to maintain a level of consistency," Kirtland said. "We still have three big games left."

Swimmers ready to get revenge

Like most teams, the men's swimming team had its share of ups and downs last year en route to their 7-6 dual meet record. But perhaps the lowest point of the 1984-85 season was the Huskies' loss to Boston College.

The Eagles came to Storrs last year as major underdogs in a contest that they had no business being in. Their times didn't compare to UConn's and the Huskies had pretty much written the meet off as a victory.

But then the unthinkable happened. The Huskies not only lost the meet due to a lack of concentration coupled with a few false starts by some of their top swimmers, but the meet left the team in a temporary state of disarray.

"We were depressed and disunified after last year's meet, because we were supposed to beat them in our last meet at home," co-captain Wes Faunce said. "We were arguing with each other and our coach was really upset. We're not going to let that happen again."

UConn will have a chance to avenge last year's loss tonight when they travel to Chestnut Hill for a 7 p.m. meet with the Eagles. Although BC has an 8-2 overall record (compared to the Huskies' 7-7 mark), they haven't really swum against tough competition all year, except for a pre-Christmas meet against undefeated UMass (at Amherst).

"They're like Southern (Connecticut), they don't
